Biografie

Anne Haug Actress

Anne Haug was born in Basel. Both parents are social workers. Very early on, her mother and father recognized their daughter's natural passion for performing and encouraged her to attend a circus school. At the age of six, she began training there and transferred as a 13-year old to the Youth Club of the Basel Theater under the direction of Bruno Cathomas. Her teachers, who also included the dramaturge Matthias Günther, supported and encouraged her to begin professional training as an actress.

She joined the Junge Theater Basel until she was accepted at the University of the Arts in Berlin where she successfully completed her acting studies. Already during this time, she began artistic collaborations with Antú Romero Nunes, Nora Abdel-Maksoud and René Pollesch, cooperations that continue today. Directors in film and theater value the broad range of the actress's skills in being able to precisely develop the subtlety of her characters in a way that is true to life.

Transcending genres, Anne Haug intelligently reveals the range of human motivations. In so doing, she has a command of comedy as well as drama, which she brings to life with her extraordinary talents for improvisation and transports them to a contemporary context. To do this, she creates a special connection between content introspection and physical expression. This can be found both in her work as an actor and as one of the most exciting literary voices of today.

The will of the actress and the author to transcend boundaries, to expand the classical repertoire with conceptual and performative possibilities that are true to life have made her one of the most sought-after protagonists of independent cinema and theater of today. She works in the German-speaking world with pioneers of new European film and theater including Aelrun Goette, Anna Bergmann, Barbara Kulcsar, Emily Charriot, Fabian Stumm, Isabell Šuba, Laura Lackmann, Lola Arias, Maris Pfeiffer, Max Färberböck, Natascha Beller, Sarah Bläßkiewitz, and Zino Wey. Audiences and the press value how the actress brings the nuances of her characters' motivations to life and, in so doing, effortlessly endows them with a credible attitude. Der Spiegel writes: 'Anne Haug's delight in attitude is also what infects the audience.'

Press Reviews | Selection

'Anne Haug: The funniest – smartest – most entertaining – truest thing I've seen in what feels like 100 years!'

Aelrun Goette, Deutschland

'Packed with sexiness, capable of unleashing a fireworks display of jokes like no other.'

Flux FM, Deutschland

'Anne Haug is a powerful cinematic doppelgänger who does not conform, does not submit, seeks no harmony, and aims to achieve none.'

Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, Deutschland

'True and unbelievably funny. Anne Haug and Melanie Schmidli perform on the narrow strip between displaying their own helplessness and the force of a special humor that arises when you look at yourself from the outside. Virtuously, and with seven buckets of sharp humor, they dissect the power structures on stage and the path leading there.'

Junge Bühne, Deutschland

'Anne Haug's joy in taking a stand is what infects the audience.'

Spiegel, Deutschland

'What Anne Haug brings to the stage on her own is the fastest and wittiest thing happening in art and society today. This kind of clever, sharp-tongued humor is the best workout for the heart, brain, and abs in the current gender debate. Anyone who doesn't watch her has only themselves to blame.'

Suse Marquardt, Deutschland

'Iggy Pop, Brigitte Bardot, and Kai Dieckmann – all played by the furious Anne Haug.'

Tagesspiegel, Deutschland

'With a joy for grand gestures and every kind of derailment, Anne Haug drives her stage characters to the edge of convention, being obscene and silly, pitiful and arrogant. And the more brazenly she flaunts her self-confidence, the more joyfully the audience cheers.'

Theater der Zeit, Deutschland

'The 'Projekt Schooril,' which actresses Anne Haug and Melanie Schmidli have been successfully producing as a series at the Sophiensaele for several years, approaches the topic in a rather mockingly subversive way. They self-ironically emancipate themselves as artists by publicly satirizing their own experiences. Roars of laughter erupt in the hall when the two earnestly count the harshest humiliations and sexist transgressions by colleagues and directors as valuable experiences. Affirmation as a feminist practice? Sounds uncombative at first but is highly subversive. The affirmative transparency in 'Projekt Schooril' proves to be a cunning strategy of artistic self-assertion.'

Zitty, Deutschland
